The Definitive Interview on Public Restrooms?
NPR's 1A - January 27, 2021

Produced by National Public Radio's local Washington, DC affiliate, WAMU, and distributed nationally, 1A's website states that its "goal is to act as a national mirror - taking time to help America look at itself and ask what it wants to be."

Host Jenn Wright does just that in what may be the definitive interview program on the needs and challenges of America's restrooms in 2021. The guest line-up featured ARA friends Lezlie Lowe (author of "No Place to Go") and People for Fairness Coalition Downtown DC Public Restroom Initiative's Marcy Bernbaum. Also, participating was Julie Chou, senior associate at Magnusson Architecture and Planning. Well worth a 37-minute listen! Click the graphic for 1A's program page.
The Definitive Research Study on Women and Restrooms?

The International Journal of Environmental Research and Public Health released the definitive study to date on women’s thoughts regarding public restrooms. The study by Siobhan M. Hartigan and others is titled, “Why Do Women Not Use the Bathroom? Women’s Attitudes and Beliefs on Using Public Restrooms.” The study collected more than 12,000 comments from over 5,000 participants. A key outcome of the study is the framework shown below.

While the study’s participants were women, surely, there are men (including members of the ARA’s sibling, International Paruresis Association) who can relate to this framework. The ARA will continue to advocate for “Potty Parity” and public accommodations that address women’s needs. Read the full study at this link.

The Definitive Restroom Nonprofit?

In many respects, the American Restroom Association is like a 16-year-old "start up." Through generous support from its sibling nonprofit, the International Paruresis Association, the ARA is embarking on an ambitious growth plan for 2021. In motion even before COVID-19, the ARA - in conjunction with its many restroom rights friends and partners - is poised to expand the voice of Americans in demanding access to clean, safe, and well-designed public restrooms. The Reading Room: Kira's "The Bathroom"

Many people ask us, "So, what's in your reading rooms?" Right now, we're reading what could be called the definitive work on bathroom design: "The Bathroom" (Viking Press, Rev. Ed. 1976) by Alexander Kira. Why is it definitive. 1. It's out of print, so that lends an air of mystery to its history. 2. It is quoted in nearly all "toilet" tomes that followed. 3. It was a first of its kind study that looked at how people conducted their activities of daily living through detailed motion and measurement studies. If you appreciate that the recommended heights for bathroom sinks have increased, you have Kira to thank. Chapters cover these topics and more:

- Historical Aspects of Personal Hygiene Facilities and Public Facilities
- Social and Psychological Aspects of Body Cleansing and Care
- The Anatomy and Physiology of Cleansing, and most significantly,
- Recommended design criteria for each of the daily aspects: cleaning hands, face, hair, body (bath/shower); perineal cleansing, defecation, and urination.

It really is a fascinating read and one of historical import. If you can find one, grab it. It has not yet been scanned by google books. A special thank you to Dr. Steven Soifer, ARA Co-founder and President, for snagging the ARA a copy.
